

Private Sector Credit Brakes on Housing Credit

- Private sector credit rose by 0.4% in April, in line with consensus and our forecasts, and sticking within a range of 0.3-0.5% growth which has been in place over the last ten months.
- On an annual basis, growth remained modest at 5.1%, and above the long-run average of 4.7%.
- A slowing in housing credit was notable. Housing credit grew 0.4% in April for annual growth of 6.0%. It was the weakest annual pace in four years. The weakness was concentrated in credit for investors, which edged just 0.1% higher in the month. Owner occupier-housing credit grew 0.6% in April.
- Business credit grew moderately, lifting 0.5% in April. It saw annual growth lift to 4.3% from 4.2% previously. Elevated business conditions continue to point to strong activity within the business sector.
- Other personal credit (which includes credit cards and personal loans) fell 0.3% in April, the third consecutive month of contraction. The annual rate of decline deteriorated from -1.0% to -1.2%. It was the weakest annual rate in other personal credit in six years. Households are unwilling to take on more personal debt given high levels of household debt and slow wages growth.

Private sector credit rose by 0.4% in April, in line with consensus and our forecasts, and sticking within a range of 0.3-0.5% growth which has been in place over the last ten months.

On an annual basis, growth remained modest at 5.1%, and above the long-run average of 4.7%.

A slowing in housing credit was notable. Housing credit grew 0.4% in April for annual growth of 6.0%. It was the weakest annual pace in four years. The weakness was concentrated in credit for investors, which edged just 0.1% higher in the month. Owner occupier-housing credit grew 0.6% in April.

Meanwhile, business credit grew moderately, lifting 0.5% in April. It saw annual growth lift to 4.3% from 4.2% previously. Elevated business conditions continue to point to strong activity within the business sector.

Other personal credit (which includes credit cards and personal loans) fell 0.3% in April, the third consecutive month of contraction. The annual rate of decline deteriorated from -1.0% to -1.2%. It was the weakest annual rate in other personal credit in six years. Soft wage growth and ongoing high household debt levels is continuing to weigh on this form of credit.

Implications

Today's data continues to signal where strengths and weaknesses lie within the domestic economy.

The moderate growth in business credit along with strong business conditions continue to be encouraging signs for spending activity in the business sector. This is in spite of the somewhat disappointing private capex release today.

In contrast, housing credit growth is moderating reflecting softer conditions within the housing sector. The strain from slow wage growth and high household debt levels is also likely having an impact on credit to households.

Janu Chan, Senior Economist
Ph: 02-8253-0898

Contact Listing

Chief Economist

Besa Deda

dedab@bankofmelbourne.com.au

(02) 8254 3251

Senior Economist

Josephine Horton

hortonj@bankofmelbourne.com.au

(02) 8253 6696

Senior Economist

Janu Chan

chanj@bankofmelbourne.com.au

(02) 8253 0898

The Detail

The information contained in this report (“the Information”) is provided for, and is only to be used by, persons in Australia. The information may not comply with the laws of another jurisdiction. The Information is general in nature and does not take into account the particular investment objectives or financial situation of any potential reader. It does not constitute, and should not be relied on as, financial or investment advice or recommendations (expressed or implied) and is not an invitation to take up securities or other financial products or services. No decision should be made on the basis of the Information without first seeking expert financial advice. For persons with whom Bank of Melbourne has a contract to supply Information, the supply of the Information is made under that contract and Bank of Melbourne’s agreed terms of supply apply. Bank of Melbourne does not represent or guarantee that the Information is accurate or free from errors or omissions and Bank of Melbourne disclaims any duty of care in relation to the Information and liability for any reliance on investment decisions made using the Information. The Information is subject to change. Terms, conditions and any fees apply to Bank of Melbourne products and details are available. Bank of Melbourne or its officers, agents or employees (including persons involved in preparation of the Information) may have financial interests in the markets discussed in the Information. Bank of Melbourne owns copyright in the information unless otherwise indicated. The Information should not be reproduced, distributed, linked or transmitted without the written consent of Bank of Melbourne.
